

What were seaside holidays like in the past?

Today we are learning:

To place events into the order in which they happened.

These three photos all show seaside holidays at different times. Which was the longest ago? Which was the most recent?

This photograph was taken about 100 years ago. It is a black and white photo and shows people fully dressed on the beach in old-fashioned outfits.

This photograph was taken around 50 years ago. It is more modern but still has old-fashioned cars to tell you that it was taken a long time ago.

This is the most recent photograph. It shows what a seaside holiday is like today.

Which of these photos do you think was taken 100 years ago?
Which do you think was taken 50 years ago? Which one do you think was taken very recently? How do you know?

Read these speech bubbles. Which one is talking about a holiday 100 years ago, which one is talking about a holiday 50 years ago and which one is talking about a recent holiday?

I wrote a letter to the hotel to book a room.

We used the internet to find and book a hotel room.

My mother phoned the hotel to book a room for us.

Were you right?

I wrote a letter to the hotel to book a room.

100 years ago most people wrote letters to the hotels they wanted to stay in. They had to wait for a letter back before they could visit.

My mother phoned the hotel to book a room for us.

50 years ago people could use their telephones to call a hotel and book a room.

We used the internet to find and book a hotel room.

Today we use the internet to research hotels to visit. We can book hotel rooms online.

Now try these speech bubbles. Which one is talking about a holiday 100 years ago, which one is talking about a holiday 50 years ago and which one is talking about a recent holiday?

We went sailing and ate fish and chips.

I went jet skiing and rode on a motor boat.

We saw a Punch
and Judy show and ate jellied eels on the beach.

Were you right?

We saw a Punch
and Judy show
and ate jellied eels
on the beach.

People loved to watch Punch and Judy shows and eat foods like jellied eels at the seaside 100 years ago.

We went sailing and ate fish and chips.

50 years ago, people did the same kind of things at the seaside that we still do today.

I went jet skiing and rode on a motor boat.

Today people can do lots of water sports thanks to the engines and motors we now have that weren't around 50 or 100 years ago.
