

Long long ago , in Ancient Greece lived a strong and confident soldier named Apollo. Apollo had a beautiful wife called Athena. Years ago, Athena was kidnapped by an old king from Crete. Apollo vowed to rescue Athena but the thing stopping was the centaur.Half man...half horse....

The beastly centaur circles his pray until they dare move then he would rear over them and lower to trample them to death. He had horns that had bloody tips and blood stained hooves . How could he Apollo defeat this monster?

Apollo's father told his brave son how to defeat the evil centaur. Apollo had to travel to mount Olympus .The next day, Apollo set of on his journey too mount Olympus .He climbed high cliffs and walked dry baron roads. Finally, Apollo reached mount Olympus.Zeus gave Apollo a sword a shield and a pair of flying boots .Apollo put on his boot and strapped his shield around is shoulder and flew over mountains and far lands.

Eventually,Apollo landed near a darkened cave where he could just about make out a horse shaped shadow .He needed to get into the cave unseen but as he moved forward by an inch and saw it his jaw dropped.

The centaur was circling Athena's cage standing tall the centaur came to a sudden halt with his blood-shot eyes staring l n to Apollo's stamping his hoof the centaur was ready to charge. Rearing over Apollo . Apollo drew his sword( he was gifted by Zeus ) covering his head with his sword ready to plunge his sword upward into he centaurs evil heart. Before he knew it the centaur was dead.The key for Athena's cage flew from the locket around the centaur's neck . Athena was saved but for how long?
